

The University of Queensland

Independently ranked as one of the top 50 universities in the world and one of Australia's top three research-intensive universities.*

Built on 100 years of tradition and culture, UQ is one of Australia's oldest and most prestigious universities. The University is a founding member of the leading Australian universities' Group of Eight (Go8), and one of only three Australian members of the select international university network, Universitas 21.

Our graduates have some of the best employment rates and starting salaries internationally. UQ was ranked 38th out of the world's universities for graduate employability by the 2008 Employer Review. At UQ you can challenge your intellect, establish worldwide social and professional networks, and advance in your chosen career path.

Business, Economics and Tourism at The University of Queensland

UQ caters for students aspiring to become global leaders in Business, Economics and Tourism.

We offer a variety of undergraduate and postgraduate programs with a wide range of specialisations. Our highly qualified academics are committed to helping students develop their expertise and equipping them for a rewarding career. UQ has won more national awards for teaching than any other Australian university.

UQ Business School is part of a highly select group of business schools worldwide to obtain full accreditation from both of the world's pre-eminent accreditation and ranking bodies, AACSB International and EFMD (EQUIS accreditation). Qualifications from the School are highly sought after and are recognised internationally as the highest quality.

UQ School of Economics is one of the most prestigious in Australia and ranks in the top 2.5% of world organisations that conduct and publish research.

UQ School of Tourism is the only tourism school in Australia with United Nations World Tourism Organisation (UNWTO) accreditation. The School boasts a number of strong partnerships with industry and offers exceptional engagement opportunities for students. World class researchers in the School are active in a number of cutting edge areas in tourism such as sustainability and visitor behaviour.

BUSINESS, ECONOMICS AND TOURISM

POSTGRADUATE INTERNSHIP PROGRAM

“I did an internship and it has been the BEST EXPERIENCE I have ever had in my life ... an internship prepares you to be competitive in the highest quality work level, giving you the chance to get a good job straightaway”

JUAN JOSÉ – MEXICO

One of the world's pre-eminent universities, The University of Queensland (UQ) delivers graduates an enviable career advantage.

UQ is offering scholarships to Latin American Masters students for a unique opportunity to undertake a tailored professional internship in addition to their study.

The internship scholarships enable students to develop professional experience in their chosen field and will provide a valuable edge in the global marketplace.

“The importance of professional internships for postgraduate students cannot be overemphasised. Australian educated Latin American graduates with industry experience have an insight and experience into the Australian culture and business environment, which is highly valued by companies with interests in Australia and Latin America.”

PROFESSOR FLAVIO MENEZES,
HEAD OF SCHOOL OF ECONOMICS

Professional Internship program

The UQ internship program is specifically designed to deliver business, commerce, economics and tourism postgraduate students with a distinct advantage in securing professional employment post-study.

The program provides you with an exceptional opportunity to gain an internationally recognised qualification from UQ enhanced by professional industry training. You will network and learn from professionals in your area of expertise, gaining vital skills and knowledge as well as inspiration for your future. And, we will match your career and study objectives with the ideal company to maximise this exceptional opportunity.

Our Latin American students have benefited significantly from internships with multinationals in the business, finance, legal and resource sectors; government agencies; global NGOs, and Australian industry leaders.
